1 – The Garden Revisited

Genesis 2:15-17; Romans 5:12-21; Matthew 21:1-11

1. Read Genesis 2:15. Thinking about your everyday responsibilities (work, home, relationships), which area feels meaningless or frustrating? How might that change if you truly saw it as something entrusted to you by God?
2. Name some specific ways God has been generous to you. Why is it so much easier for us to fixate on what feels missing?
3. God’s boundaries define how life actually works. Identify a place where you know what God says but are choosing to do or think differently. What is driving that decision?
4. Imagine if your week was fully shaped by dependence on God. What would noticeably change in your decisions, or rhythms?
5. Where have you seen your reactions expose something sinful in your heart, what did it reveal?
6. How often do you think of your own mortality? How is that (or how isn’t that) influencing what you prioritize in your life?
7. Condemnation is a result of sin...often people can fall into two ditches on either side of the truth: minimizing guilt or feeling crushed by it. How does viewing the gospel rightly correct those extremes?
8. Trace one recurring struggle in your life, what does that pattern suggest about what your heart is trusting or loving?
9. Jesus comes as a humble King, not a conquering one. What kind of “king” do you instinctively want ruling your life?
10. Where is your faith most visible, and where is it noticeably absent? If someone observed your decisions, priorities, reactions, what would they conclude about who Jesus is to you?
11. Jesus obeys where Adam failed. What’s one specific act of obedience or surrender you need to take this week—and what might make that difficult?

1. I see the life we were made for (Genesis 2:15-17)

Psalm 100:3

2. I face the ruin we brought on ourselves (Romans 5:12-21)

Romans 6:23

"...for the sin committed by human beings can be traced to their entering the world spiritually dead and alienated from God...Adam as the head of the human race sinned as our representative, and we are sinners by virtue of being in corporate solidarity with Adam...thus all people inevitably sin because they enter this world alienated from God."

- Thomas Screiner, Baker Exegetical Commentary on the New Testament

3. I submit to the King who came to restore it (Matthew 21:1-11)

"[Jesus'] actions on Sunday set in motion a series of events that could result only in either his overthrow of the Romans and the current religious establishment—or his brutal death. [SLIDE 14] He has crossed the point of no return; there would be no turning back."

- Kostenberger & Taylor, The Final Days of Jesus

Romans 5:19
